

AGASYA AND CONFETTI'S

We continue the Angeles City Bar Hopping Guide for all the Pattaya residents who are going on a regular trip to this "Philippine Sin City" and to those who are considering going. There is not so much to do during the daytime, but the bar life is fantastic. We recommend a 3 to 4 day trip, then you need a relax break back in Pattaya.

Agasya (formerly Golden Gate, Halloween, Amore): Opened in September 2004. Korean owner. Bar fine P1200. "I don't usually do bar reviews - living in AC does that to ya - but what the hell... I guess the first clue that I wasn't gonna love the place was the name? G-d only knows how to pronounce it! Sort of like Bananitas, where I always get a kick out of the door girls trying to pronounce the name... Anyway, I strolled into the place last night. Can you say airplane hanger? Can you say warehouse chic? I was ASSAULTED immediately by an ear-bleed level blast of the techno-teen bopper-rap-brain dead noise that passes for "music" in some clubs. As is often the case, the bass was cranked up to about 11 on speakers THAT JUST CAN'T HANDLE the volume...my clothing and entire body started to vibrate. And if you've SEEN my body, this is NOT a pretty sight! Strike one. The place was FREEZING. Not just cold - or uncomfortable - but MEAT-HANGING-FREEZING. Strike two. Though frozen and deaf, I persevered and stepped further inside. Can you say Vegas

Casino Showroom? I really only noticed the Vegas-style showroom-booth seating fronting the stage...the stage itself has a few risers, with girls displayed on tiers. The booths are so far away from the stage that you would need a flare gun or space-station-strength laser beam to get a dancers attention. Strike three. I beat a hasty retreat. Now I can't remember the last time I walked into a joint and didn't stay for at least one beverage and a LOOK at the available nubiles...so maybe I missed something? Maybe at the bar on the side and the seats way way way in the back things are happening that I didn't know about? I fled to the safety of Champagne, where my two Cherry Girls made it all better." - "My favorite bar is Agasya. In Korean, Agasya means girl. Most people won't like the bar because it's very hard to interact with the girls. The bar gives me a fishbowl feeling as you have to ask the waitress/mamasan to bring any girl over. Bar fine is 1500 peso before 11pm and 1200 peso after 11pm. I went there every day but didn't bar fine any girl. The mamasan (young one) and the waitress are a lot of fun. I think the lineup is excellent."

Confetti's: The former Night Out. There is a large stage and often many dancers. Owner is Mal "Young one" Brown who subleased the bar to Dags. "Confetti's is not under my control or big mal, as it is currently subleased to Dags."

They do have some different policies than we do in Tom Cat, so please do not get the two bars confused." - "They had a great lineup and zero customers, for some unknown reason." - "I had so much fun in here. I bought 4 chickens for the girls and they were all very appreciative. I had quite a party going on before I left for Manila. Stewart is one crazy son of a bitch sometimes and insisted I help him polish off a bottle of tequila. The body shots in this place were wild. This bar was by far the best bar for me on this trip."
